Biological intermediates are the metabolic products of xenobiotic chemicals which are chemically highly reactive and which appear to be largely responsible for the toxic and carcinogenic effects attributed to the parent compound. Furthermore, these effects are thought to be mediated by

Indeed, progress in the study of biological reactive intermediates continued unabated and out of frequent communication among the participants of the Turku conference a rose the concept of continuing the discussion of this rapidly increasing body of knowledge in the form of a second conference to be followed by another publication summarizing the results presented at the meeting. As a result of considerable planning and discussion among M.W. Anders (USA), J.W. Bridges (UK), J.R. Gillette
